

Designer — How-to Guide

You work one board: the artwork/digitizing queue. You never handle orders, stock, or money — and you never see which seller a job belongs to. That privacy is deliberate. After sign-in you land on the Board.

Work a card

1. Open Board. Each card is a job needing artwork or digitizing.

 Screenshot: Designer board

2. Claim a card to take it — your name shows as the claimer (designers appear in violet, factory in slate, the Pink Design partner in pink).
3. Click the card to open the full brief: the artwork, the description/notes, and any reference files (they stay attached to the card).
4. Do the design work.
5. Send for review. An approver (admin) moves it to the approved lane. Note: a file existing isn't the same as approved — the chip stays amber until it's approved, then turns violet.

Need embroidery digitizing?

Use the Digitizer: drop the artwork and any text, arrange the layers on the canvas (drag to move, corners to resize, top nub to rotate, drag cards to reorder), then export the machine file (.emb) or a PNG preview.

 Screenshot: Digitizer

Earnings

Earnings shows what you've earned from completed design work — your number only.

 Screenshot: Earnings

Shared

Chat (reach support), Help, Notifications (updates on your cards), Settings (your profile).

Not yours

- Orders, Shipping, Inventory, Purchasing, Finance — a designer works artwork only; these aren't on your board.
- You can't buy design files or see any seller's balance.
- Cross-seller privacy is absolute: never learn or reveal that a design was used by another seller. If you spot a duplicate, it's a factory-only concern — don't act on it.